July, 11th & 12th 2017

The Ligue de l'Enseignement and its sport organizations, USEP and UFOLEP, are organizing the second European Sport Convention AT THE UNIVERSITY PALACE OF STRASBOURG

One aim

We have the ambition to support the development of a new shared sport culture in all the French and European territory.

The challenge ? Build with actors a new sport culture where the sport citizen serves another idea of Europe

One Common Thread, three subjects, different workshop formats...

...built with the laboratory of Strasbourg University. The program of this second edition will have one common thread, the relationship between sport and citizenship. Three blocks will allow to get deep into three aspects of this relationship: Shaping active citizens through sport, Accessibility and sport as a right, Territorial organization of sport. These subjects will be addressed through one roundtable and four different workshop formats: To Understand, to Act, to Get trained, to Debate.

Participants

Grassroots practitioners, trainers, coaches, students, NGOs, sport clubs, popular education and school movements, universities, businesses, public bodies, medical and social organization are invited to exchange on their points of view and their expectations to encourage in territorial policies taking into account educative and social orientations.

French-English translation will be provided.

Why Strasbourg?

We wanted to organize the second European Sport convention in Strasbourg, a European capital, as it is one of the cities with the most innovative sport and culture policy as evidenced by its experiment around medical prescription of sport activities.

Roundtable #1: Building an active citizen through sport

For the happiness, pleasure, and well-being it brings, for its ability to allow people from various backgrounds to meet and play with each other, sport educates and forms citizens. But which kind of European citizens? If physical activity can promote civism, it can also be the catalyst of tensions and incivilities. A perfect environment for individual and collective fulfilment, the “association” is a place for everyone to test the reciprocity of rights and responsibilities. From self-control to accountability, sport, in this framework, gradually builds up an open-minded and inclusive citizen that contributes to the associative project. Under which conditions does sport really emancipate? What are the levers for it to become a real training tool towards European citizenship?

Roundtable #2 : Sport as a right – accessibility

“Every human being has a fundamental right to physical education, physical activity and sport without discrimination.” Enshrined as a fundamental right in the international charter of physical education, physical activity, and sport of UNESCO, sport can indeed be a strong integration and social inclusion factor. Yet, 42% of European citizens never practice a physical or sport activity. How can we make this right effective enough to further sport accessibility for all? How can we set up the necessary mediations and create between all stakeholders the necessary synergy to share and implement this « other sport culture »?

Roundtable #3 : Territorial organization of sports

Sport policies have a strong impact on the development of the territories. National governments, local authorities, private companies, and sometimes Europe, regularly support operations related to the development of sport clubs. Essential to the enrichment of our living conditions and strengthening of our social relationships, these operations, implemented through precarious financial equilibriums, are still fragile on the long term. How can we reconcile the development of (sport) infrastructures and spatial equity, how can we find a balance between economic drive and wellbeing of local population? How can civil society take part in the setting and implementation of public policies? Can European sport policies contribute to local dynamics?

STRASBOURG

Rich of 2000 years of history and exchanges, Strasbourg is a symbolic city localized at the heart of Europe. A humanist city that became a European capital where numerous E.U. and European institutions are now based. Symbol of a restored peace on a continent shaken by wars and pioneer of European integration, Strasbourg is now the home of the European Parliament, the Council of Europe, the European court of Human rights, the general secretary of the Assembly of European regions, the European youth center and the Ombudsman. The city is a place where democracy and local governance can flourish and innovate.
